

STUDENT EMPLOYMENT AT THE UNIVERSITY OF IOWA

Undergraduate student employment is linked to direct benefits for both the university and students. Student employees are more engaged on campus, develop various transferrable skills such as time management, and experience positive outcomes including higher retention and 4-year graduation rates.

Benefits of Student Employment ¹
Positive Campus Experience	Positive Student Outcomes
Transferrable skills	Higher year over year retention rates
Stronger campus engagement	Higher 4- and 6-year graduation rates
Networking	No negative effect on G.P.A.
Social development
Greater awareness of campus resources

Nationwide Undergraduate Student Employment Trends

Figure 1

Data collected by the National Center for Education Statistics found that 17 percent of full-time undergraduate students worked an average of 20 to 34 hours per week, and 46 percent of part-time students worked an average of greater than 35 hours per week.

The University of Iowa

Sixty percent of UI students work on campus while attending college, working an average of eleven hours per week. On an annual basis, over 7,000 students are employed through on campus part-time hourly positions earning over $25 million. Over 1,100 students are employed annually through the Work-Study Program, earning over $3 million.³ In 2017, the fall to fall retention of students who worked during their first academic year was 5% greater than their peers who did not work. First-year student workers also earned a higher GPA compared to their peers who did not work.

The Division of Student Life

The Division of Student Life's mission is to foster student success by creating and promoting inclusive educationally purposeful services and activities within and beyond the classroom. The division employs 2,100 hourly students, and it is our goal to make student employment a high-impact activity that allows students to reflect on and integrate their earning through Iowa GROW[®].

Iowa GROW[®] (Guided Reflection on Work), an initiative created within the Division of Student Life, uses brief, structured conversations between student employees and their supervisors to help make the learning that is occurring through student employment more visible to the student.

Iowa GROW[®] participants were more likely than non-participants to report that campus employment helped them build key competencies such as conflict negotiation, time management, the ability to work effectively across difference, and communication skills.

WHAT DO THE STUDENTS SAY?

Olivia Harmon,
University Housing and Dining

“Working for University Catering has allowed me to step into a leadership role that I never thought I’d achieve as a sophomore in college. I’ve learned some incredible leadership skills that will be crucial to my academic life now and my career later in life. This job has taught me real-life skills that tie in with exactly what I’ve been learning in my classes. It’s great to see my work life and academic life come together.”

Olu Osayemi,
Student Health and Student Wellness

“Working at Student Health & Wellness has provided me with opportunities to connect the information I am learning in class to work settings, such as performing fitness tests. It has helped me learn more about different career options and graduate programs available at the university. It has also provided me with opportunities to work with amazingly talented individuals who truly care about students, and are always striving to positively influence students’ health.”
